

PRESIDENT WILSON SUMMONS CONGRESS TO MEET IN EXTRAORDINARY SESSION ON SECOND OF APRIL

CONVINCED THAT GERMANY IS WAGING WAR ON THIS COUNTRY, HEAD OF NATION ACTS QUICKLY

Body Will be Told That a State of War Has Existed Between the United States and Germany for Some Time and Formal Declaration to That Effect May Follow: President's Call Says That "Matters of Grave Concern" Confront the Country.

CABINET IS UNITED ON COURSE TO BE TAKEN

WASHINGTON, March 21.—President Wilson, recognizing that Germany practically is making war on the United States, today called Congress to assemble in extraordinary session April 2 to deal with the situation.

The purpose of the session—now called two weeks earlier than the date first set—as announced in the President's proclamation is to receive a communication from the chief executive on "grave questions of international policy."

The President's proclamation follows: "Whereas, public interests require that the Congress of the United States should be convened in extraordinary session at 12 o'clock noon on the second day of April, 1917, to receive a communication concerning grave matters of national policy which should be taken immediately under consideration.

"Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim and declare that an extraordinary occasion requires the Congress of the United States to convene at the Capitol in the city of Washington in extraordinary session on April 2 at 12 o'clock noon, of which all persons who shall at that time be entitled to act as members thereof are hereby required to take notice.

"Given under my hand and the seal of the United States of America, the 21st day of March in the year of our Lord 1917, and of the Independence of the United States the 41st."

The President in his address will detail how Germany practically has been making war on the United States by ruthless destruction of American lives and ships on the high seas in contravention of all laws of nations and humanity.

Congress is expected to pass a resolution declaring that a state of war has existed between the United States and Germany for some time.

Such a resolution in itself will not be a declaration of war in a technical sense, although practically it will amount to the same thing.

As a consequence the United States will take further steps to protect its interests on the high seas against the warlike acts of Germany and whether an actual state of war will come to exist in its full sense will depend on the future acts of the Imperial German government.

Since last Sunday when three American ships were sunk in quick succession with loss of American lives, bringing the total number of Americans lost through German submarine operations to more than 200—the President and all his advisers have recognized that a state of war existed. From all parts of the country have come calls for the summoning of Congress in extraordinary session.

Although the President by the provisions of the constitution must leave it to Congress to make the practical declaration of war, such advice as have come to the White House from members of Congress, governors of states, public officials and many hundreds of citizens have contained statements of support of such policy in its fullest sense. The cabinet which urged the move on the President at yesterday's session is described by its members as having been more thoroughly united than it has been on any other question before it.

All official Washington openly acknowledged that nothing less than Germany's abandonment of her newly announced campaign of submarine ruthlessness could prevent it and no one here supposed Germany would change her determination.

The Allied nations openly gave indication of their belief that the United States would soon be involved in the war and that possibility was recognized in Germany before the new submarine campaign was announced when Foreign Minister Zimmermann, working through Count von Bernstorff and the German minister in Mexico, attempted to unite Japan and Mexico in an alliance to make war on the United States.

Plans for the armies are not so fully matured. It is believed, however, that President Wilson will recognize the possibility of the army's participation in war when he addresses Congress by discussing the necessity of universal military training. In a tentative way plans for marshalling the final strength of the regular army, the National Guard, and the raising of a volunteer army of 500,000, has been worked out in the army war college. The volunteer army of 500,000 is planned as a nucleus of what eventually would be an army of 2,000,000 and would be assembled in training camps.

With the knowledge that the United States is practically certain to declare a state of war existing, many officials believe that Germany may begin warlike operations against the United States in a fuller sense. Although the Hague convention of 1907, to which both the United States and Germany are signatories, declares that hostilities shall not begin without formal notice to belligerents as well as neutrals, it is recognized that Hague have been so openly disregarded during the war in Europe that no compliance with them may not be expected with any confidence. Before the Hague convention there was ample precedent for beginning of hostilities without formal war declaration. In the war with Mexico, General Taylor's forces were over the Rio Grande and two battles had been fought before the formal declaration of war was made. Japan struck Russia before the formal declaration of war had reached the Russian capital, although one day previously the Japanese ambassador had notified the Russian foreign office that Japan reserved liberty of action in protecting her interests. The precedents of history show that the great majority of the world's conflicts have been begun before formal declarations of war were made.

According to authorities on international law, a condition of war arises in three ways: First, a declaration of war; second, a proclamation or manifesto declaring that a state of war exists; third, through the commission of hostile acts of force.

One authority on international law describing ways in which activities may begin without formal declaration, says acts of force by way of reprisals or during a pacific blockade or during an intervention might be forcibly resisted, hostilities breaking out in this way.

Proposals for private yards in other parts of the country will be received a week from today and it was probable that today's proposals would not be made public until all offers are in although contracts will be awarded conditionally.

ST. QUENTIN MAY SOON BE OCCUPIED BY THE FRENCH FORCES

By Associated Press.
St. Quentin, reputed headquarters of the German emperor and his general staff for the two years following the battle of the Marne and scene of a great French defeat in the war of 1870, is today within sight of the French infantry who are following fast on the heels of the retreating German army. Twelve miles to the south, French troops are also looking down on La Fere and are within reach of the German heavy guns in the invaders have really elected to hold the Hindenburg line running from Lille to Louvain.

So far there is no evidence that the German retreat was halted, such facts as are known indicating the contrary. La Fere is supposed to be one of the consequences of the Hindenburg line, yet General Nivelle has been able to occupy Tervuren, less than two miles from La Fere, apparently without encountering serious resistance.

Tervuren is an important railroad junction from which three roads branch, one north of La Fere, a second southwest of Noyon, and a third northwest of St. Quentin.

Even more significant is the fact that the British, advancing on the north against Cambrai, another vital point on the Hindenburg line, have won incendiary fires blazing in the rear of that town.

Today's French official report shows that General Nivelle's armies in their advance toward the Hindenburg line are taking no chances at any return thrust by the Germans. Each position occupied is being thoroughly organized. Details of the advance toward the southern limit show the French to have reached the line of the Aisne river which runs some 10 miles west of Laon, and reveals the capture of 10 more villages on both sides of the Laon road.

Important reports come from the northern end of the Franco-Belgian front indicating that the Germans may be preparing also for a retreat north of Arras well along the line in to Belgian territory. Amsterdam dispatches report German activity there, similar to that which preceded the German retreat further down the line.

Excellent news from the Entente came to hand today from Persia where the Russians, moving southwest from Sakhalin, have crossed the border into Mesopotamia. They are thus drawing appreciably closer to the line of the Tigris up which the Turks, driven by the British from Baghdad are retreating to ward Mosul.

ACCUSED MOTHER DENIES MURDERING HER LITTLE SON

Bertha O'Brien Testifies That Infant May Have Died as Result of Fall.

DEFENSE CLOSES ITS CASE

After All Testimony Is Taken, Court Declares a Recess Until 1:30; Jury May Get Case Late This Afternoon; Girl's Pathetic Story.

UNIONTOWN, March 21.—Bertha O'Brien, 20 years old, of Fairchance, on trial with her sister, Blanche O'Brien, 21 years old, in criminal court for the alleged murder of her four-week-old son, told her story on the witness stand before Judge J. C. Van Swearingen today. A new element was brought into the case by the girl's testimony—that the infant may have been killed by a fall sustained by the mother when she slipped on the ice in East Main street, striking the back of her head. The child was in her arms at the time she fell on the night of last January 12, she testified. She said that she did not know at the time whether the child had been injured in the fall, but said that half an hour afterward she told her sister she believed the baby to be dying.

The defense closed its case at 11 o'clock and the court immediately declared a recess until 1:30. It is expected that the jury will retire late this afternoon.

For the first time since the little corpse was found in Georges creek, near Fairchance, by two youthful skaters was the name of the father of the illegitimate child revealed. Bertha O'Brien testified that Roddy Swearer, of Washington, Pa., was the father of the infant. She said that the last time she had seen him was in last May and that she last heard from him as being in West Virginia.

The baby was born last December 10 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Miles in Baker avenue, Uniontown. The girl testified she loved her child and desired to raise the boy, treating the infant the best she knew how. She testified that from the time that the child was born until he died, "he didn't seem to grow any."

The young mother told the jury that two or three days before the child died, she bought a bottle of paragon, giving the medicine to it once a day in water with sugar. She said that she had seen her mother give paragon to babies, and she never knew that it could cause death.

"Bertha, did you kill this baby?" Attorney George Patterson, the counsel for the sisters, asked her.

"I did not," she replied.

"Did you like this baby?" "I did."

The accused girl told of having gone to the home of Mrs. P. A. Johns in an attempt to have the child taken in charge by the Children's Aid society. She said that Mrs. Johns told her that the child couldn't be taken at the time. She said that on another occasion she went to Mrs. Johns' home and Mrs. Johns was away.

Eat Less Meat and Take Salts for Backache or Bladder Trouble.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first, you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Drugstores here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble. Adv.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. His efforts to banish it brought out these little olive-colored tablets.

These pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel, but to let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Most headaches, "dizziness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "lousy" and "heavy." Note how they "clean" your brain and how they "perk up" the spirits. 10c and 25c a box. All druggists.

CRISIS OF WOMAN'S LIFE

Change Safely Passed by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Wagoner, Okla.—"I never get tired of praising Lydia E. ## Vocal Delights in New Columbia List

THE Tenor of Tenors, Lazaro, gives a magnificently powerful rendering of the great aria, "M'Appari" from "Martha"—note on note leading up to a climax so breath-taking and wholly tremendous that it could only have been sung by the one "marvel-voice." (48788)

Among the other distinguished artists, Lucy Gares sings "The Nightingale Song" and the well-known "Listen To The Mocking Bird" in a soprano of exquisite quality that, combined with bird-calls by a marvelous girl whistler, makes this a record truly worth hearing. (A 5937) Another remarkable record is Graveyard's interpretation of the infinitely sweet melody of the world's most loved lullaby, "Kentucky Babe," (A 5939) and Morgan Kingston's wonderfully expressive singing of "My Little Love" and "Wonderful Garden of Dreams." (A 5932)

Al Jolson is again the "star number" of the fourteen popular vocal hits, with "Ev'ry Little While" (A 2182), and there are ten dances as good as the fox-trot listed below.

This Little Girl Had the Whooping Cough

There isn't any "cure" for this disease, but her mother wisely rubbed her with the "external" treatment—Vick's VapoRub salve, which loosens the phlegm, and eases the coughing paroxysm. Better than internal medicines for all forms of croup or cold troubles.

Mrs. Walter Bishop, 139 Wright St., Corry, Pa., keeps a "Bodyguard" on hand to protect the family from all forms of cold troubles. This Bodyguard is the Southern remedy, Vick's VapoRub Salve, and you just apply it externally—no harsh medicine to swallow. VapoRub is absorbed through the skin, taking out the tightness and soreness, and is also inhaled as a vapor. Mrs. Bishop used it on her little girl for whooping cough, and on her husband and herself for deep colds, and writes: "We just apply it over the throat and chest and cover with a warm flannel cloth, and put a little up the nose, and the next morning your head is clear. We try not to be without it in the house."

Remember that Vick's VapoRub can be used freely with perfect safety on the smallest child. 25c and up.

PLAYGROUND'S BEST CURE.

The Courier still holds to the conviction that the best cure for Connelville will be a well equipped and conducted playground system.

No one doubts for a moment but that the persons interested in securing the enactment of a law of ordinance have undoubtedly felt in the effectiveness of such a measure in remedying the evils it is designed to correct. In theory, and operating under ideal conditions, there would be little difference of opinion upon this point, but by the test of practical experience it will certainly be found to fall far short of expectations.

In the first place regulations of this character are not adapted to present day conditions to the extent that they would have been several years ago. While it is undoubtedly true that there is less respect for parental authority, of a certain kind, on the part of children now than during the days of our grandparents, few persons of mature years will contend that a revelation to the stern, uncompromising and often brutal family discipline of fifty or more years ago would be desirable, or that it would have the same influence upon child life of today that it had when our parents were children. While it is all too true that the great freedom of action is permitted many children, and often they are allowed to go unrestrained by any form of discipline, it should not be overlooked that many children are directed in their conduct and behavior by means and agencies having not even the slightest resemblance to the correctives in use half a century ago.

It is recognized by enlightened parents and educators alike that children are more amenable to right influences and control when they are provided with means to amuse, instruct, interest or entertain them. In the modern system of child control the imperative "Don't do that" is being largely replaced by the suggestive "What would you like to do?" It is recognition of the fact that the child nature craves activity, and will engage in it in some form or other, that has led to the development of the modern playground idea. Here, under trained direction and control, the children are permitted full play of their energies and activities in sports and pastimes suited to their years and strength. While these engaged they are unconsciously subject to a form of discipline which will prove much more beneficial to them than regulations which prohibit an outburst of childish spirits without providing anything to take its place.

RIGHT OF PUBLIC SUPREMACY.

The decision of the Supreme Court on the Adamson law seems to have given the traitor's brotherhood something they wanted and also something they were not expecting to get. The decision supported their political contention for the establishment of an 8-hour basis day in the train service, but the opinion of the court has placed an interpretation upon the law that may prove of more importance than the determination of the main issue.

The decision very explicitly defines transportation service as public service and denies the right of a group of workers to strike in concert as a result of wage differences. "That right," said Chief Justice White, "is necessarily surrendered when the men engaged in public service. They are comparable to soldiers in the ranks, who in presence of the enemies of their country may not desert."

"The public interest," the opinion said, "begins a public right or regulation to the full extent necessary to secure and protect it." In the emergency of a threatened paralysis of transportation Congress had the regulatory authority to provide a wage standard and other means to protect the public interest. The action of Congress was in effect compulsory arbitration, "a power which Congress possessed and which inevitably resulted from its authority to protect interstate commerce in dealing with a situation like that before it."

Following so soon upon the enactment made in New York conceding the 8-hour basis day, the decision in a certain sense supports that agreement. It does even more. Through the broad interpretation given by the Supreme Court in denying the right of men in the train service to strike, it leaves for all time the probability that our transportation systems will in the future be tied up because of a disagreement between employers and employees as to wages or hours of work.

The decision is, therefore, recognition of the supreme right of the public interest to protection in an emergency.

It is that threatened at the time the Adamson law was enacted and again last week.

Had that suggestion of the Church Efficiency Report, that churches should provide their pews with automobiles, been without limit as to the size of the membership it would doubtless have been received with more general favor by the members of the church.

It was not, as our contemporary assumes, a case of "distorting the truth," it was merely stating the truth about the distorted.

The churches are disconcerting that the members of a church must be done in a business like way—working capital must be provided by some more dependable means than the chicken and waffle supper.

The city council may yet be driven to the necessity of taking a referendum on the new fire house site.

It is now the brotherhood's turn to cut a melon.

The Business Women's Christian Association is living up to its name in providing, in a business way, for a reading room for its members.

The city council is about to establish a collection agency.

Just to remind you, this is the first day of spring.

THE HOLDUP.

THE GARAGE BILL.

The garage bill is a successful method of discouraging people from buying automobiles at once.

When a man buys a spanking new automobile which in the hands of a skillful driver can climb a 15 per cent grade on its hind legs, he does not realize that it is the flower that fades and the grass that withers.

When an automobile breaks down in some remote corner, it is sent to the garage where expert workmen can take it all apart and hold a post-mortem examination. Every once in a while the trouble can be located without taking out the engine, but it is much more satisfactory to tear down everything and have the honest mechanic find the trouble.

When a man looks at this list of lost and found items, he will wonder how he had been born in the stone age instead of the horseless age.

Georgia Liquor Going Up Before It Goes Down

The Usual Ordinary Dollar Kind Now Sells For $2.50 in Prohibition Georgia.

In May last Prohibition laws went into effect in Georgia. How little that law is regarded may be seen from an Atlanta dispatch under date of January 3, and published in a Philadelphia paper. Some extracts follow: "In some cities in Georgia liquor may be bought at any time. It is true that it is not difficult to get a bottle of whisky in Atlanta, for instance, but owing to the fact that blind tigers are taking considerably longer chances than formerly, the price has materially advanced. Dollar liquor sells for about $2.50 a bottle, while some of the better grades run as high as $4 for a short quart. An Atlanta man who was in Macon recently, and wanted a bottle of whisky mentioned the fact to a friend. He got it in a few minutes. Reports reach here from other cities in Georgia where whisky may be obtained without material difficulty, all of which is apparently indicative of the fact that there has been a loosening of the reins since May 1. It is natural that these conditions should have produced some further agitation, and the rapid increase in liquor shipments has had somewhat of the same effect. Atlanta increased from some 7000 shipments in May to more than 40,000 in October, and the holiday record will probably pass 50,000." When merely one city in a Prohibition State shows by FACTS that almost 7 times more liquor is shipped to it five months after it embraces Prohibition (May liquor shipments 7000 packages, October 40,000 packages) isn't it a FALLACY to hold that Prohibition prohibits?—PENNSYLVANIA STATE BREWERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Consumer Pays

Every advance in price is an additional burden to the consumer. In the last two years advances have come thick and fast. Many merchants have taken advantage of the conditions and have added profits away beyond the legitimate rise. Where there has been a ten per cent advance, many retailers have marked their prices up thirty per cent.

This has been a hardship to the consumer, and the ordinary man wonders where it is going to stop. Thousands of people in Fayette County have turned to mail order houses for relief, and thousands of dollars are going away from home that should be kept here.

Every merchant should protect his customers, instead of bleeding them. Paper has noted the greatest advance of any article of common use.

I placed a contract for 70,000 rolls of Wall Paper last July. The wall paper was very slight at that time. Since then there have been four advances, and now am giving you opportunity to save money. You are not asked to pay these last four advances in price, but can buy your wall paper at low figures. I am underlining any mail order house in the United States.

Bring in their sample books they have sent you and compare. This is one store that fears no mail order competition. I buy from two of the largest factories in the United States and I buy enough to net the price I buy at the right price and I sell at the right price. Every paper has the real value built in. Before you send your money away, figure with me and compare.

Illness Lasts 26 Years Until Nerv-Worth Came

The First Bottle of This Tonic Started a Wonderful Improvement.

This was welcome news to a host of friends who had been suffering for years as to Mrs. Ream's condition and sufferings. The information came in the following signal statement, given by Mrs. Ream Feb. 21, 1917:

"I have been afflicted with rheumatism for 26 years. I tried all the doctors. Went to Mt. Clemens, Mich., springs. Tried all the remedies I could learn of but got no relief whatever. Had stomach trouble and indigestion and suffered severe pains all the time. Had awful headaches and terrible vomiting spells. In fact I considered myself in a hopeless nervous condition. The very first bottle stopped the stomach indigestion and headache trouble. The soreness has left me. I feel much stronger and am gaining in weight, and am continuing the use of Nerv-Worth, believing it will eventually rid me of the torments of rheumatism, which it has greatly benefited. It is certainly the best remedy I have ever known of. All my acquaintances and neighbors know of my former terrible condition."

LAKE FLEET CAPACITY

For 1917 Increased Only 175,000 Tons Over That for 1916.

The lake ore and coal fleet will begin the season's operations next month with a capacity of 3,113,000 tons, according to the latest compilation, which is an increase of only 175,000 tons, as compared with the beginning of last season. This means that the shortage of tonnage which existed last fall will continue and that rates will be strong and higher than they were then, says the Coal Trade Journal.

It is difficult to figure just how much of either coal or ore this fleet will carry as there are some steamers commonly classed as package-freighters that can carry coal if it is to be had and some steamers will go up light for ore if the coal rates are not satisfactory. At present the coal shippers are reckoning on a rate of not more than 45 cents to Lake Superior, as compared with 30 cents in recent seasons, though the rate has not yet been established. The ore rate is fixed at $1, gross. It has gone up so much that it may stand in the way of coal, though it is not always the rate which determines the movement.

If there is more freight in any line moving than the docks can handle promptly all that the fleet can do is to go into something else until the delays are less. So if the ore fleet is hung up badly at any time the remedy is to carry coal instead of going up light. If the fleet moves according to natural capacity, there will be 20 trips made in the season and the 398 steamers will bring down 62,246,000 tons of ore, reckoning that a sufficient proportion of them will take up coal enough to meet that demand. Some ore boats carry little or no coal.

The lake shipyards have been running at full capacity since the start-up of brisk business in the fall of 1915, but several carriers are lost, each season and a considerable number of vessels have either gone to the coast or are to go with the opening of the lake season. At present the shipyards are not turning out anything but the largest carriers for the lake trade and it takes a long time to build them, so the capacity cannot be increased very rapidly.

There was carried last season about 4,415,000 net tons of hard coal to the upper lakes, mostly from Lake Erie, and as there is about four times as much soft coal moving by that route as there is hard coal, the total for a normal season is about 22,225,000 tons for all varieties of coal.

PING BODIE'S GREAT HOME RUN

Ping Bodie played a game of ball on the coast somewhere not so long ago and during its progress dropped a home run over the fence.
"That was a lucky one," modestly declared Ping as he came back to the bench. "It didn't get over that fence more than a foot."
It so happened that the homer won the game and thereby loomed up as the one important walk-off of the day. On the train on the return trip another bunch of ball players climbed aboard and, of course, inquired about the game.
"Won it on my homer!" said Ping. "I slapped the ball over that fence a mile."
An hour and a half later Ping was on the fair. By this time the homer had reached huge proportions.
"Say," said Ping to a friend he met on the boat, "you should have seen that blow! They sent the two fastest horses in the country after it in relays, and they haven't caught up with it yet."

MACK SAYS HE'S READY.

Feisty Man of Danabill Has Got Team He Believes In

It is something more than two years now since Connie Mack began to execute his plan of touring about one of the greatest baseball machines the game has ever known.

About two years since Connie cut loose from Jack Coombs, Eddie Plank, Chief Bender, Eddie Collins and Jack Barry. Straightway he began anew his process of raking the bush for a new winning combination. At the time he held a period of two years would suffice to put him back in the race. Recently he outlined his hopes for the coming season. His new outfit as named in this statement will show one remnant in each of the four departments of play held over from the old regime. Wally Schang, Joe Bush, Stuffy McInnis and Ames Strunk are the four selected around which to build the new machine.

If Mack decides to dispose of Bush and Schang his plans may not work out so well. Together with Schang will be carried Myers and Pichalek to handle the work back of the plate.

Joe Bush, Jack Nabors, Elmer Myers and Russell Johnson are regarded as four regulars for the pitching staff. In addition there are some half dozen others including the famous Rube Slaughter to furnish the extra talent.

For his infield Mack will retain McInnis at first, Grover at second and Witt at short. Bates at third will complete the inner defense. Stuffy, of course, is a known quantity. Witt played through last season. Grover and Bates are new brands though the former played awhile with the club last season. Bates is placed chiefly on his strong recommendation as a minor league together with inside reports from Mack's scouts.

In the outfield Strunk will be aided by Ping Bodie, of White Sox fame and Frank Thrasher, a recruit from the Southern league. Mack believes that Bodie can deliver the goods despite his former failure with the Sox. Thrasher comes along with a record of never having hit below .300 in any league. He hit better than .300 for Atlanta last season.

GEERS AFTER RECORD.

Grand Old Man of Harness Turf Wants to Handle Reins Fifty Years

Edward T. (Pop) Geers, the grand old man of the harness turf, will try to set a record for longevity in active participation for all time and unless all signs fail he will succeed. Recently Geers celebrated his sixty-sixth birthday, and next May he will have rounded out forty-five years as an active driver.

It is his ambition to go five years more thus completing half a century on the track. It was feared when the veteran met with an accident last season and was badly smashed up that his racing days were over, but he made a surprising recovery for a man of his years and is now in fine health. He is not only training hard every day that weather permits, but is rounding out his day of work with a horseback ride. Geers' sixty-sixth birthday was perhaps a more interesting one to him than any which preceded it for the reason that he also celebrated the first event in which he ever drove a horse in harness faster than two minutes. In the Columbus August meeting he sent Napoleon Direct over the distance in 1:10. Up to 1910 his best trotting and pacing miles were 2:01 by The Envoyette, and 2:00 by the Dan Dan King. His training stable now contains some of the best harness horses in the world.

LUCKY STRIKE

The real Burley Cigarette

AS you peacefully crunch that golden-brown, buttered-hot slice of morning toast, think what a great invention toasting is anyway. Is there any flavor like it (Cries of "No!" "No!")

We've added a new discovery to this fine old invention, to produce the Lucky Strike cigarette. We went right back to the toasting fork and the kitchen stove for the idea—after five years of experiment.

The tobacco—it's toasted

You see, we wanted to make a Burley cigarette. Because we know that smokers were awfully fond of Burley—and it certainly is "blame good tobacco"—60 million pounds poured out of those green, blue and red tins last year. That's enough for 35 billion Burley cigarettes.

Lucky Strike, the real Burley cigarette

But until we struck this toasting idea a Burley cigarette couldn't be made; flavor wouldn't hold. But now! That Burley flavor stays right with Lucky Strike—the real Burley cigarette. Because the tobacco—it's toasted.

JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

It was a white clear night, so filled with brilliant stars that faced himself could have hunted by the light of them. The lynx had exhausted itself, and lay crouched on its belly as Kazan had. Gray Wolf appeared. As usual, Gray Wolf held back while Kazan began the battle. In the first or second of these fights on the trap-line, Kazan would probably have been dismembered or had his jugular vein cut open, had the force been free. They were more than his match in open fight, though the biggest of them fought pounds under his weight. Chance had saved him on the Sun Rock. Gray Wolf and the porcupine had both added to the defeat of the lynx on the snad-bar. And along Henri's hunting line it was the trap that was his ally. Even with his enemy thus shackled he took bigger chances than ever with the lynx under the windfall.

The cat was an old warrior, six or seven years old. His claws were as long and a quarter long, and curved like scimitars. His forefeet and hindfeet were free, and as Kazan advanced, he drew back, so that the trap-bar was stuck under his body. Here Kazan could not follow his old tactics of circling about his trapped foe, until it had become tangled in the chain, or had so shortened and twisted it that there was no chance for a leap. He had to attack face to face, and suddenly he lunged in. They met shoulder to shoulder. Kazan's fangs snapped at the other's throat, and missed. Before he could strike again, the lynx lunged out its free hindfeet, and even Gray Wolf heard the ripping sound that it made. With a snarl Kazan was flung back, his shoulder torn to the bone.

Then it was that one of Henri's hidden traps saved him from a second attack—and death. Steel jaws snapped over one of his forefeet, and when he leaped, the chain stopped him. Once or twice before, blind Gray Wolf had leaped in, when she knew that Kazan was in great danger. For an instant she forgot her caution now, and as she heard Kazan's snarl of pain, she sprang in under the windfall. The lynx Henri had hidden in the space in front of the butt-house, and Gray Wolf's foot found two of these. She fell on her side, snarling and whining. In his struggles Kazan sprang the remaining two traps. One of them missed. The fifth, and last, caught him by a hindfoot.

Henri and Weyman were out early. When they struck off the main line toward the windfall, Henri pointed out the tracks of Kazan and Gray Wolf, and his dark face lighted up with pleasure and excitement. When they reached the shelter under the moss of fallen timber, both stood speechless for a moment, astounded by what they saw. Even Henri had seen nothing like this before—two wolves and a lynx, all in traps, and almost within reach of one another's fangs. But surprise could not hold delay the business of Henri's hunter's instinct. The wolves by first in his path, and he was raising his rifle to put a steel-capped bullet through the base of Kazan's brain, when Weyman caught him eagerly by the arm.

"Wait!" he cried. "It's not a wolf. It's a dog!"

Henri lowered his rifle, staring at the collar. Weyman's eyes shot to Gray Wolf. She was facing them, snarling, her white fangs bared to the teeth she could not see. Her blind eyes were closed. Where there should have been eyes there was only hair, and an exclamation broke from Weyman's lips.

"Look!" he commanded of Henri. "What in the name of heaven—"

"One is dog—did dog that has run to the wolves," said Henri. "And the other is—wolf!"

"And blind!" piped Weyman.

"Owl, blind, indeed!" added Henri, falling partly into French in his amazement. He was raising his rifle again. Weyman seized it firmly.

"Don't kill them, Henri," he said. "Give them to me—alive. Figure up the value of the furs they have destroyed, and add to that the wolf bounty, and I will pay. Alive, they are worth to me a great deal. Let me see a dog—and a blind wolf—master!"

He still held Henri's rifle, and Henri was staring at him, as if he did not yet quite understand.

Weyman continued speaking, his eyes and face blazing.

"A dog—and a blind wolf—master!" he repeated. "It is wonderful, Henri. Down there, they will say I have gone beyond reason, when my book comes out. But I shall have proof. I shall take twenty photographs here, before you kill the lynx, and the wolf alive. And I shall pay you, Henri, a hundred dollars apiece for the two. May I have them?"

Henri nodded. He held his rifle in readiness, while Weyman snapped his camera and got to work. Snarling fangs greeted the click of the camera-shutter—the fangs of wolf and lynx. But Kazan lay cringing, not through fear, but because he still recognized the mastery of man.

Henri shot the lynx, and when Kazan understood this, he tore at the end of his trap-chain and snarled at the writhing body of his forest enemy. By means of a pole and a babble noose, Kazan was brought out from under the windfall and taken to Henri's cabin. The two men then returned with a thick sack and more babble, and blind Gray Wolf, still fettered by the traps, was made prisoner. All the rest of that day Weyman and Henri worked to build a stout cage of saplings, and when it was finished, the two prisoners were placed in it.

Before the dog was put in with Gray Wolf, Weyman closely examined the collar and tooth-marked collar about his neck.

On the brass plate he found engraved the one word, "Kazan," and with a strange thrill under note of it to his diary.

After this Weyman often remained at the cabin when Henri went out on the trap-line. After the second day he dared to put his hand between the snarling bars and touch Kazan, and the next day Kazan accepted a piece of raw moose meat from his hand. But at his approach, Gray Wolf would always hide under the pile of balsam in the corner of their prison. The instinct of generations and perhaps of centuries had taught her that man was her deadliest enemy. And yet, this man did not hurt her, and Kazan was not afraid of him. She was frightened at first; then puzzled; and a growing curiosity followed that. Occasionally, after the third day, she would thrust her blind face out of the balsam and sniff the air when Weyman was at the cage, making friends with Kazan. But she would not eat. Weyman noted that, and each day he tempted her with the choicest morsels of deer and moose fat. Five days—six—seven passed, and she had not taken a mouthful. Weyman could count her ribs.

"She die," Henri told him on the seventh night. "She starve before she eat in that cage. She want the forest, the wild life, the fresh blood. She two—free year old—too old to make a killing!"

Henri went to bed at the usual hour, but Weyman was troubled, and sat up late. Midnight came. He rose, opened the door softly, and went out. Instinctively his eyes turned westward. The sky was a blaze of stars. In their light he could see the lynx, and he stood, watching and listening. A sound came to him. It was Gray Wolf, gnawing at the sapling bars of her prison. A moment later there came a low sobbing whine, and he knew that it was Kazan crying for his freedom.

Lounging against the side of the cabin was an ax. Weyman seized it, and his lips smiled silently. He moved toward the cage. A dozen blades, and two of the sapling bars were knocked out. Then Weyman drew back. Gray Wolf found the opening dark, and she slipped out into the starlight like a shadow. But she did not flee. Out in the open space she waited for Kazan, and for a moment the two stood there, looking at the cabin. Then they set off into freedom, Gray Wolf's shoulder at Kazan's flank.

In the swamp Kazan and Gray Wolf found a home under a windfall. It was a small, comfortable nest, shut in entirely from the snow and wind. Gray Wolf took possession of it immediately. She flattened herself out on her belly, and panted to show Kazan her contentment and satisfaction. Kazan kept close at her side. A vision came to him, unreal and dreamlike, of that wonderful night under the stars—ages and ages ago. It seemed—when he had found the leader of the pack, and young Gray Wolf had crept to his side after his victory and had given herself to him for mate.

The pair had now begun to grow over Gray Wolf's slightest eyes. She had begun to grow, to rub her eyes with her paws, to whine for the sunlight. The golden moon and the stars. Slowly she began to forget that she had ever seen those things. She could not run now swiftly at Kazan's flank. Slowly and heavily she became utterly blind. She could find a rabbit, but she could find no two miles distant, and the presence of man she could pick up at an even greater distance. On a still night she had heard the splash of a trout half a mile away. And as these two things—scent and hearing—became more and more developed in her, those same senses became less active in Kazan.

He began to depend upon Gray Wolf. She would point out the hiding place of a partridge fifty yards from their trail. In their hunts she became the leader—until game was found. And as Kazan learned to trust to her in the hunt, so he began just as instinctively to heed her warnings. If Gray Wolf reasoned, it was to the effect that without Kazan she would die. She had found the leader of the pack, and she was ruling his side to put a steel-capped bullet through the base of Kazan's brain, when Weyman caught him eagerly by the arm.

"Wait!" he cried. "It's not a wolf. It's a dog!"

Henri lowered his rifle, staring at the collar. Weyman's eyes shot to Gray Wolf. She was facing them, snarling, her white fangs bared to the teeth she could not see. Her blind eyes were closed. Where there should have been eyes there was only hair, and an exclamation broke from Weyman's lips.

"Look!" he commanded of Henri. "What in the name of heaven—"

"One is dog—did dog that has run to the wolves," said Henri. "And the other is—wolf!"

"And blind!" piped Weyman.

"Owl, blind, indeed!" added Henri, falling partly into French in his amazement. He was raising his rifle again. Weyman seized it firmly.

"Don't kill them, Henri," he said. "Give them to me—alive. Figure up the value of the furs they have destroyed, and add to that the wolf bounty, and I will pay. Alive, they are worth to me a great deal. Let me see a dog—and a blind wolf—master!"

He still held Henri's rifle, and Henri was staring at him, as if he did not yet quite understand.

Weyman continued speaking, his eyes and face blazing.

"A dog—and a blind wolf—master!" he repeated. "It is wonderful, Henri. Down there, they will say I have gone beyond reason, when my book comes out. But I shall have proof. I shall take twenty photographs here, before you kill the lynx, and the wolf alive. And I shall pay you, Henri, a hundred dollars apiece for the two. May I have them?"

Henri nodded. He held his rifle in readiness, while Weyman snapped his camera and got to work. Snarling fangs greeted the click of the camera-shutter—the fangs of wolf and lynx. But Kazan lay cringing, not through fear, but because he still recognized the mastery of man.

Henri shot the lynx, and when Kazan understood this, he tore at the end of his trap-chain and snarled at the writhing body of his forest enemy. By means of a pole and a babble noose, Kazan was brought out from under the windfall and taken to Henri's cabin. The two men then returned with a thick sack and more babble, and blind Gray Wolf, still fettered by the traps, was made prisoner. All the rest of that day Weyman and Henri worked to build a stout cage of saplings, and when it was finished, the two prisoners were placed in it.

Before the dog was put in with Gray Wolf, Weyman closely examined the collar and tooth-marked collar about his neck.

On the brass plate he found engraved the one word, "Kazan," and with a strange thrill under note of it to his diary.

After this Weyman often remained at the cabin when Henri went out on the trap-line. After the second day he dared to put his hand between the snarling bars and touch Kazan, and the next day Kazan accepted a piece of raw moose meat from his hand. But at his approach, Gray Wolf would always hide under the pile of balsam in the corner of their prison. The instinct of generations and perhaps of centuries had taught her that man was her deadliest enemy. And yet, this man did not hurt her, and Kazan was not afraid of him. She was frightened at first; then puzzled; and a growing curiosity followed that. Occasionally, after the third day, she would thrust her blind face out of the balsam and sniff the air when Weyman was at the cage, making friends with Kazan. But she would not eat. Weyman noted that, and each day he tempted her with the choicest morsels of deer and moose fat. Five days—six—seven passed, and she had not taken a mouthful. Weyman could count her ribs.

"She die," Henri told him on the seventh night. "She starve before she eat in that cage. She want the forest, the wild life, the fresh blood. She two—free year old—too old to make a killing!"

Henri went to bed at the usual hour, but Weyman was troubled, and sat up late. Midnight came. He rose, opened the door softly, and went out. Instinctively his eyes turned westward. The sky was a blaze of stars. In their light he could see the lynx, and he stood, watching and listening. A sound came to him. It was Gray Wolf, gnawing at the sapling bars of her prison. A moment later there came a low sobbing whine, and he knew that it was Kazan crying for his freedom.

Lounging against the side of the cabin was an ax. Weyman seized it, and his lips smiled silently. He moved toward the cage. A dozen blades, and two of the sapling bars were knocked out. Then Weyman drew back. Gray Wolf found the opening dark, and she slipped out into the starlight like a shadow. But she did not flee. Out in the open space she waited for Kazan, and for a moment the two stood there, looking at the cabin. Then they set off into freedom, Gray Wolf's shoulder at Kazan's flank.

In the swamp Kazan and Gray Wolf found a home under a windfall. It was a small, comfortable nest, shut in entirely from the snow and wind. Gray Wolf took possession of it immediately. She flattened herself out on her belly, and panted to show Kazan her contentment and satisfaction. Kazan kept close at her side. A vision came to him, unreal and dreamlike, of that wonderful night under the stars—ages and ages ago. It seemed—when he had found the leader of the pack, and young Gray Wolf had crept to his side after his victory and had given herself to him for mate.

The pair had now begun to grow over Gray Wolf's slightest eyes. She had begun to grow, to rub her eyes with her paws, to whine for the sunlight. The golden moon and the stars. Slowly she began to forget that she had ever seen those things. She could not run now swiftly at Kazan's flank. Slowly and heavily she became utterly blind. She could find a rabbit, but she could find no two miles distant, and the presence of man she could pick up at an even greater distance. On a still night she had heard the splash of a trout half a mile away. And as these two things—scent and hearing—became more and more developed in her, those same senses became less active in Kazan.

Before the dog was put in with Gray Wolf, Weyman closely examined the collar and tooth-marked collar about his neck.

Less than three hundred yards away they came to a thick clump of scrub spruce, and almost ran into a trap. It was abandoned. Life and fire had not been there for a long time. But from the tepee had come the man-mell. With legs rigid and his spine quivering, Kazan approached the opening to the tepee. He looked in. In the middle of the tepee, lying on the charred embers of a fire, lay a ragged blanket—and in the blanket was wrapped the body of a little Indian child. Kazan could see the little moccasined feet. But so long had death been there that he could scarcely smell the presence of it. They slunk away, their ears flattened and their tails drooping, and did not stop until they reached their swamp home. Even there Gray Wolf still sniffed the horror and her muscles twitched and shivered as she lay close at Kazan's side.

CHAPTER XIV.

A Shot on the Sand Bar.

July and August of 1911 were months of great fire in the Northland. The swamp house of Kazan and Gray Wolf, and the green valley between the two ridges, had escaped the sons of devastating flame; but now, as they set forth on their wandering adventures again, it was not long before their padded feet came in contact with the seared and blackened desolation. Kazan led his blind mate first into the south. Twenty miles beyond the ridge they struck the fire-killed forest. Winds from Hudson's bay had driven the flames in an unbroken sea into the west, and they had left not a vestige of life or a patch of green. Blind Gray Wolf could not see the blackened world, but she sensed it.

All of her wonderful instincts, sharpened and developed by her blindness, told her that to the north—and not south—lay the hunting-grounds they were seeking. The strain of dog that was in Kazan still pulled him south. It was not because he sought man. It was simply dog instinct to travel southward; in the face of fire it was wolf instinct to travel northward. At the end of the third day Gray Wolf went between the two ridges, and swung north and west into the Athabasca country, striking a course that would ultimately bring them to the headwaters of the McFarlane river.

Late in the preceding autumn a prospector had come up to Fox Smith, on the Slave river, with a pickle bottle filled with gold dust and nuggets. He had made the find on the McFarlane. The first units had taken the news to the outside world, and by midwinter the earliest members of a transient hunting horde were rushing into the country by snow-shoes and dog-sledge. Other finds came thick and fast. The McFarlane was rich in free gold, and miners by the score stalked out their claims along it and began work. Latecomers swung to new fields farther north and east, and to Port Smith came rumors of "finds" richer than those of the Yukon. A great excitement at first, then a hundred, five hundred, a thousand—rushed into the new country. Most of these were from the prairie countries to the south, and from the pioneer beds of the Saskatchewan and the Fraser. From the far North, traveling by way of the Mackenzie and the Liard, came a smaller number of seasoned prospectors and adventurers from the Yukon—men who knew what it meant to starve and freeze and die by inches.

One of these late comers was Shady McTiggor. There were several reasons why Shady had left the Yukon. He was "in bad" with the police who patrolled the country west of Dawson, and he was "broke." In spite of these facts he was one of the best prospect-tor that had ever followed the shores of the Klondike. He had made discoveries running up to a million or two, and had promptly lost them through gambling and drink. He had no conscience, and little fear. Brutality told the child thing written in his face. His underhand jaw, his wide eyes, his forehead and grizzled mop of red hair proclaimed him at once as a man not to be trusted beyond one's own vision at the reach of a bullet. It was suspected that he had killed a couple of men, and robbed others, but as yet the police had failed to get anything "on" him. But along with this bad side of him, Shady McTiggor possessed a goodness and a courage which even his worst enemies could not but admire, and also certain mental depths which his unpleasant features did not proclaim.

City Physicians Explain Why They Prescribe Nuxated Iron to Make Beautiful, Healthy Women and Strong, Vigorous Men

NOW BEING USED BY OVER THREE MILLION PEOPLE ANNUALLY

Quickly Transforms the Flabby Flesh, Poneless Fleshes, and Pallid Cheeks of Weak, Anemic Men and Women Into a Perfect Glow of Health and Beauty—Often Increases the Strength of Delicate, Nervous, Run-Down Folks 200 Per Cent in Two Weeks' Time.

New York, N. Y.—It is conservatively estimated that over three million people annually in this country alone are taking Nuxated Iron. Such astonishing results have been reported from its use both by doctors and laymen, that a number of physicians of the country have been asked to explain why they prescribe it so extensively, and why it apparently produces so much better results than were obtained from the old form of inorganic iron.

Extracts from some of the letters received are given below:

Dr. King, a New York physician and author says: "There can be no vigorous iron man without iron. Fuller means anemic. Anemia means iron deficiency. The skin of anemic men and women is pale. The flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, the brain fails and the memory fails and they often become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron comes from the blood of women, the reason goes from their cheeks."

In the most common foods of American, the starches, sugars, (cane syrup, molasses, etc.), white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, lupins, etc., faring degenerated, anemic, iron is lost. To be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from the iron-rich foods, and a sticky, slimy, waste-water, the water in which our vegetables are cooked is responsible for another great iron loss.

Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe old age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron just as you would the salt when your food has not enough.

forming drugs and nauseous concoctions and take simple Nuxated Iron. I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved, who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart troubles etc. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more or less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood.

Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. He was a well-to-do man with a blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man in fact. I said to him: "You are a well-to-do man, standing his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—Nuxated Iron. He had filled his blood with iron. At 20 he was in had health, at 46 he was a well-to-do man and nearly all iron—now at 60, after taking Nuxated Iron and iron salts, he was a well-to-do man with the buoyancy of youth.

Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly-looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how long you can stand without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary iron and stand three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of persons, run-down people, who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of weakness or depression. It provides iron from ten to fourteen days' time.

fourth episode of "A Lass of the Lumblands." This episode, like all the others, is a complete story in itself, but is also part of the main story. This serial has proven to be one of the most popular ever run in Connellsville and the attendance is gaining each Wednesday. On the program also is George Ovey, the ever popular comedian in a Cub comedy. Winifred Greenwood will be in a three reel American feature, "Citizens All," and Anna Little will be in a three reel Mustang, "Nellie Dean and the Home Folks." This is one of the varied programs so popular with Arcade patrons which permits seeing a complete subject every half hour. The Arcade is the only house in town that runs Helen Holmes, Helen Gibson and Martin Sais, the big stars in realistic pictures. All their shows have plenty of action.

Tomorrow will be Orm Hawley in "The Nation's Peril," a war picture dealing with preparedness and is said to contain many scenes resembling the big ones in "The Battle of France." On Friday and Saturday will be the New York Hippodrome spectacle, "America," which is said to have cost a million dollars to stage. Miss Eleanor Savage will sing at both the afternoon and evening performances of "America" both days.

South Connelville Girls Fall to Show Up For Preliminary Game.

In the first double header game of the season at the Maccabee hall, last night the Elks left the floor and protested the game with the Mount Braddock team, after the referee refused to allow Rhodes, center for the Elks, to play, charging him with striking Jenaway. The Elks protested that Jenaway struck the first blow and should have been ruled out also.

The first half ended 6-4 for Mount Braddock and when the Elks left the door, it stood at 12-6. The protest will be brought up before the board of directors at a meeting Friday. The lineup:

Jenaway forward Goodman
Bowman forward Featherman
S. Matthews forward Rhodes

Field goals—Matthews 2, Rhodes, J. Matthews. Foul goals—S. Matthews 8 out of 8; Jenaway 3 out of 3; Goodman 1 out of 1; Rhodes 2 out of 3. Substitutions—R. Matthews for Bowman. Referee—Drowley.

In the second game between the Baltimore & Ohio railroad five and the Broad Ford team, the latter won, 21-17. When the first half ended, the score was 13-4 for the Overholt team. The railroaders made substitutions for Butternore and Hannigan, both being out of condition. Butternore with a broken finger and bad eye, and with DeBolt and Shuler in the game the railroaders came back strong. The lineup:

Field goals—Bartley 3, Martin 3, Rist, Edenbo, Dubeck, Goodwin, DeBolt. Foul goals—Bartley 3 out of 3; Hannigan 1 out of 1; Martin 1 out of 1. Substitutions—DeBolt for Hannigan; Shuler for Butternore. Referee—Drowley.

In their preliminary game the South Connelville girls did not show up and the game was forfeited to the Overholt girls. A picked team composed of big girls and little girls, called the Kiddies and Growups played, the "little ones" winning from their elders, 12-7.
